Nonprofit Executive Director Transitions: "Knowing When and How to Leave"

We are frequently asked to provide consulting services to the boards of nonprofits, or coaching to the departing executive about leadership transitions and preparation of the organization for change and new leadership. We've decided to share our key learnings from these experiences with interested Executive Directors - hopefully long before they are considering an exit. This coming summer, we will be offering a workshop, in three sessions, to help Executive Directors determine:

- When is the right time to leave a job that has been your life's work?
- What can be done to prepare the board and the organization for a significant leadership change?
- What's the job of a departing executive and the board in leading a transition?
- What needs to happen during a planned transition to best benefit the organization and the new leader?

For more information about the workshop, please visit us here. We value and respect every participant's need for confidentiality, and are committed to safeguarding your privacy in a supportive environment. We will ask for your information and then reach out to schedule a 15 minute confidential phone call to explore your interest and discuss appropriateness of this workshop for you.
